FIRST DAY OF ISSUE

Stamp books

The Post Office provides stamp books featuring different cover designs, six to a series, on a regular basis.

50p stamp books are available from stamp vending machines and at philatelic counters. The present series of covers feature veteran cars.

Stamp books, each containing ten stamps at first class and second class rates, are available at ordinary counters. At the moment the first class covers feature industrial archaeology and the second class covers, military aircraft.

FIRST DAY OF ISSUE

cream-coloured earthenware which pleased her so much that Josiah Wedgwood was granted permission to style himself 'Potter to Her Majesty' and call his creamware 'Queen's Ware'.

Dinner service for Catherine the Great

A few years later the Empress Catherine the Great of Russia ordered a dinner service in Queen's Ware for some two dozen people, decorated in maroon flowers, which was eclipsed in 1774 by the completion of another order placed by the Empress for a huge combined dinner and dessert service for fifty people and which consisted of 952 painted pieces of gardens and English scenery. Today this is kept in the Hermitage Museum, Leningrad where some eighty pieces are on display.

Meanwhile Josiah's personal life had undergone a big ordeal. In 1768 he suffered a severe attack of inflammation on the knee left weak by smallpox. The attack was so serious that amputation was essential. Josiah recovered rapidly, thanks to the care of his wife Sarah, his third cousin whom he had married in 1764. Josiah equipped himself with a wooden leg made by a Mr Addison of Long Acre.
